

Kalbak-Tash. Panel 6

Description

The panel has several zoomorphic figures. In the upper part there is a large contour image of the animal. He has a trapezoidal body, four legs apart in motion. The head is poorly traced due to lichens damaging of the panel. Below there are two silhouette animals. One is turned to the right, the other, smaller in size, to the left. Below there are two more similar images, also rotated in different directions.

Technical description

The surface is damaged by erosion processes. Several large cracks are recorded on the rock, dividing the rock outcrop into several separate blocks. The surface is damaged by overgrown lichens.

Method

Retouch
